The year six girls were lucky enough to speak with two innovator business leaders with diverse career paths from fashion to working with the UN to founding charities.

Marc Duke, a parent of a student, invited three business leaders to share their story to the young boys in year 6 - they spoke about their passion for tech and the skills that will distinguish the students from others.

From Charlene:

It was an honour and a privilege to share my career journey with the girls. I want all girls to really be free, to reach and dream for whatever they can imagine. No limitations!

The students no longer feel daunted about the prospect of secondary school - they are excited for the opportunities ahead!
